

Archana Dwivedi is the Director of Nirantar, a feminist resource centre for gender and education that works on issues of young people, empowerment, and sexuality. She has more than 20 years of work experience in the areas of gender and education. She has contributed significantly by researching and writing on issues of women's empowerment and young people's education and empowerment from a feminist perspective. Her engagement on these issues has further been strengthened by work at the field level with women and girls belonging to marginalised communities.